

Become a Carbon Awareness Ambassador in Leicester City Schools

We are recruiting Carbon Literacy trained volunteers to become ambassadors and deliver carbon literacy awareness training in schools as part of Leicester City's Climate Emergency Action Plan.

The Carbon Awareness project's aim is to get 2000 school-aged pupils trained and 'carbon aware'. By becoming an ambassador, you will support with the delivery of this programme in schools.

Train the Trainer

The Sustainable Schools team will be delivering 'train the trainer' sessions to go through how the school programme works, working in schools and the logistics of delivering the course. This sessions will help you to feel confident in delivering the session yourself if you wish, or support others where preferred. We aim to start delivering sessions in schools towards the end of the spring term.

Next Event: Tuesday 8 March 2022

1.30pm – 3.30pm (face to face)

Venue to be confirmed once booked

*This event will be hosted at University of Leicester but will be open to students from both universities.

To get involved, register your interest using via this eForm.

Who would benefit from this project:

All carbon literacy trained students, especially education studies and environmental studies students

Why participate?

- Use your Carbon Literacy accreditation to educate the next generation
- Gain experience working with school aged students
- Develop your presentation and delivery skills
- Give school students a better understanding of how climate change will affect them and others
- Engage with young people in the climate emergency and how they can practically tackle the issues

What does the training cover?

- Participants understand their role as carbon literacy ambassadors
- Participants develop skills to speak and present to students and young people
- Participants will know how to act while in schools
